Editors' Note

We are excited to announce this very special "David Epston" release of the Journal of Contemporary Narrative Therapy. This release contains two original papers by David Epston, along with a set of notes on the topic of moral character and wonderfulness.

The first paper is an unpublished keynote address that David gave in 2017 at Massey University in New Zealand on the topic of "Finding Children's Imaginative Know-How." This paper outlines some of the key theoretical and ethical concerns related to working with children in therapy and how wonderfulness interviews can serve as an ethical reorientation to the many ways that children are marginalized in therapy.

The second paper, "Wonderfulness Interviews: An Origin Story," has been a long time in the making and is well worth the wait. As the title reveals, this paper tells the story of how David Epston invented the practice of wonderfulness interviews in a moment of necessity and under the most unusual of circumstances. I am sure that you will agree that this paper was well worth the wait.

Sincerely,

Tom Stone Carlson
