Editors' Note

We are excited to announce another release of the Journal of Contemporary Narrative Therapy. The current release has two papers that really expand the limits of narrative practice when working with individuals who live with and hear voices.

The first paper, "Voices are Nourished by Fear" highlights the innovative work of Christoffer Haugaard, in collaboration with his client Laura, and the roles that fear and curiosity play with people who are in relation with voices.

In the second paper, "Respecting Voices: A Report on a Co-research Project Concerning Voice Hearing", Christoffer works to provide a compilation of knowledges and discoveries made alongside his clients, and provide an alternative perspective on how to understand, work, and interact with voices, which are sometimes referred to as auditory hallucinations.

We are confident that you will enjoy both papers.

Sincerely,

David Epston
